GROUNDS OF APPEAL

Introduction

This appeal is submitted against the ruling of Mrs. Justice Farbey, delivered on 08 February 2024, at the Administrative Court, Cardiff. The appellant seeks to challenge the decision on the grounds that it represents a disproportionate interference with his right to respect for private and family life under Article 8 of the European Convention on Human Rights (ECHR) and fails to consider the principles of international jurisdiction and enforceability of the Serious Crime Prevention Order (SCPO) in jurisdictions without mutual legal assistance treaties with the United Kingdom.

Grounds for Appeal

1. Violation of Article 8 ECHR: The lower court's ruling imposes restrictions that unduly infringe upon the appellant's right to a family life. The enforcement of the SCPO, particularly considering the appellant's residence in The Russian

SKELETON ARGUMENT ON BEHALF OF THE CLAIMANT JASON JUUL

The Appellant, Mr. Jason Juul, fervently contends for the discharge of the Serious Crime Prevention Order (SCPO) imposed upon him in connection to past fraud-related offenses dating back to 2012. The Appellant posits that the continuous renewal of the SCPO under present circumstances is not only ethically dubious but also legally untenable, chiefly due to the following reasons:

a) Despite alleged breaches, there has been no substantiated evidence of further criminal activity, rendering the perpetual renewal of the SCPO unjustifiable under the purview of the Serious Crime Act 2007.
b) Mr. Juul now resides beyond the jurisdictional confines of the United Kingdom, having established residency in Russia. This relocation not only renders the enforcement and monitoring of the SCPO impractical but also raises significant legal questions regarding its extraterritorial application.
